Fundamentals of Accounting for Lawyers (Legal Accounting)

By: Dr. Hussam Addin Ahmad Khalil – IASCA Member

The book presents a scientific approach that combines science, knowledge and practical experience in accounting for lawyers and jurists for more than three decades. The book explains and presents the academic subject with a simple language to make the understanding and use of its content easier for researchers and scholars.

The book helps lawyers, judges and jurists discuss the reports they submit to courts and enhances the level of knowledge about the accounting issues they face in dispute settlement, filing lawsuits before courts, or while discussing witnesses and others. This book provides real linkages between the issues of those working in the legal field and the issues of the auditing, accounting and taxes disciplines.

The book elaborates on the discussions of income and sales tax laws to facilitate the litigation process before the income tax court as well as other courts. The book also addresses these issues to help lawyers in the discussions that are conducted in the general meetings of companies of all types. The various accounting and financial processes based on the companies law, which the lawyers and judges handle on a daily basis, were also addressed in this book.

The scientific material of the book was divided into some perspectives as follows:

1. The First Perspective: The theoretical perspective, which presents an introduction to the subject and paves the road for practical applications.

2. The Second Perspective: The practical part is represented through practical cases and examples.

3. The Third Perspective: The legal perspective, This perspective links the Jordanian law and accounting and auditing disciplines.

Accounting could never be practiced away from the Jordanian Companies' Law which contains legal provisions that should be applied by accountants.

This book is based on scientific references such as:

1. The IFRS book issued by the IFRS Foundation.
2. The Jordanian Income Tax Law No. 34 for 2014 and the amendments thereof.
3. The Jordanian Income Tax Law No. 6 for 1994 and the amendments thereof along with the regulations and instructions issued based on the Law.
4. The Jordanian Companies Law No. 22 for 1997 and the amendments thereof.
5. The book titled Applications in income and sales tax accounting according to IFRS and IAS - by Hossam Addin Ahmad Khalil and Wasfi Hussien Al-Tarawneh.

Handling Difficult Audit Clients*

By: Alaa Abdul Aziz Abu Naba'a

MACC, CIA, CPA, CRMA, CICP

An expert in Internal Auditing, Control, and Governance

One of my colleagues asked me: how do you handle audit clients ⁽¹⁾ that refuse to address the important notes included in the internal audit activity report? ⁽²⁾ Because this is an important question, and in my opinion, many colleagues face that situation every now and then, I'd like to write about this crucial topic.

Before answering this important question, I'd rather discuss the root causes of the rejection.

Rejection might not arise after issuing the report (the monitoring phase), but may

1 We prefer to avoid using expressions like: "managers of the activities subject to auditing" and the "auditee" in different internal audit activity reports, because such expressions might be provoking and may amplify the adverse view of the internal audit activity, it's better to replace these expressions with "audit clients."

2 The word "activity" was used because internal auditing services may be provided by an independent unit or department within the organization or by an external party through (outsourcing), or a combination of both.

occur before that phase, the main reasons behind that include: the absence of prior documented agreement between “the internal audit team” and “the audit client”. The agreement should include the levels of assessment of the importance of the notes of the internal audit activity, that’s why we find, in many cases, great inconsistencies between the two parties regarding the importance of a note. A very important note or a risky note, from the point view of the internal auditor, might not be important from the point view of the client. The biggest misfortune occurs when this disparity exists between the members of the internal audit team.

To avoid this problem, I recommend the following:

1. To avoid the problems between the members of the internal audit team (for example, between the supervisor and the head of the internal auditing), it is always preferred to have a prior agreement about the levels of assessment in the planning phase followed by documenting such agreement in the work documents.
2. To avoid problems between the internal audit team and the audit client, it is always preferred to reach a prior agreement about the assessment levels, specifically at the kick-off meeting, then documenting this agreement in the minutes of the meeting.

In this context, the reader may wonder: “What if an agreement was not reached at the beginning?” In my opinion, this happens a lot, especially in the cases where the senior management fails to define the levels of risk appetite of the organization and have such levels approved by the board of directors.

Auditing Standard No. 2120 - Risk Management - stipulates that: “The internal audit activity must evaluate the effectiveness and contribute to the improvement of risk management processes”, in the implementation guidance of this standard, a reference was made to the chief audit executive (CAE) and the internal auditors, indicating that they should clearly understand the organization’s risk appetite form one hand, and its consistency with the vision and objectives of the organization on the other hand, through a comprehensive understanding of the organization’s work strategies and the risks that were defined by the board of directors; to achieve two main goals:

1. To link the internal audit plans to the strategies, vision, and objectives of the organization.

3 In internal auditing standards, the expression “report” was not used to refer to the outcomes of the internal audit assurance and advisory tasks, and the word “communication” was used instead, this is because the outcomes could be communicated to the concerned parties orally or in written. Written reports could be printed or electronic, or could be in the form of a graph or an image, the communication could also be either formal or informal. The expression “communicating” gave more flexibility to auditors in communicating the outcomes of the internal audit work to the clients.

2. To form recommend responses to the risks that are consistent with the organization’s readiness to take risks.

Therefore, I recommend that the senior management should define and document the organization’s levels of acceptable risks and risk appetite, then get them approved by the board of directors with a recommendation from an audit committee or risk management committee (if any) or from the executive management of the organization. Internal audit activity may help greatly in this matter by providing relevant advice and information.

In this context, the reader may wonder:

1. Does the audit client have the right to refuse the note, the recommendation, or both in its comment or response to the notes and recommendations provided by the internal audit activities?
2. What if the audit client accepted the risks that will arise as a result of not addressing the note?

To answer the first question, I will ask a question: Should the acceptance of the note or the recommendation be imposed on the audit client? The answer is definitely no, the audit client is entitled to reject any note or recommendation and the internal audit report could be issued while including such rejection, as the audit committee or the board of directors have the final say to accept or reject that. At the end of the day, all those working in the internal audit profession must realize that all the recommendations issued by the internal audit activity or the audit committee are not binding to the executive management, they become binding only when the recommendations of the special auditing committee, regarding the acceptance of the outcomes of the internal auditing activity, are approved by the board of directors, or if there’s a prior authorization to the committee to accept the outcomes because the audit committee has no direct powers over the CEO of the organization unless through the board of directors.

Before answering the second question, I’d like to point out that this also happens a lot, I’d also like to remind the readers that the main purpose of the work of the internal audit activity, through various reporting, ⁽³⁾ is to reassure the senior management and the board of directors and advise them about the governance, risk management, and controls of the organization. If the CAE found that the senior management has accepted a level of risk that should not be accepted by the organization, the CAE should discuss this matter first with the senior management to understand their point of view, but if they both couldn't reach a settlement, standard No. 2060 - reporting to senior management and the board of directors, and standard No. 2600 - communicating the acceptance of risks - oblige the CAE to report the matter to the board of directors. However, if the issues are urgent and cannot be postponed to the time of the board's meeting, it's better to take the needed arrangements to report immediately.

One of the great quotes of Larry Harrington, the former president of the Institute of Internal Auditors, says: "At the end of the day, we don't get paid for the audit reports we write, or for the results we conclude, we get paid for what we do to make our organizations better". Therefore, internal auditors should maintain the good reputation of the activity by caring for the quality of their output, the sound planning for the various internal audit tasks, and finally they should work to continuously improve the services they provide.

The Saudi Organization for Certified Public Accountants Adopts the COVID-19-Related Rent Concessions after June 30, 2021

JEDDAH - In response to the consequences of COVID-19, the Saudi Organization for Certified Public Accountants (SOCPA), represented by the International Accounting Standards Committee, looked into the extension of the COVID-19-Related Rent Concessions that SOCPA had previously granted to lessees to enable them of implementing some of the requirements of IFRS 16, leases. The concessions give the lessees the option to handle the reductions in some lease installments due to COVID-19 by exempting them from applying the contracts' amendment requirements stipulated in IFRS 16 in order to facilitate the application of the standard.

The IASB has extended the period of the concessions for another year that will end by June 2022.

Given that these amendments do not contradict with the work environment in the KSA, the Committee considered the amendments appropriate for application in KSA and decided to adopt the "COVID-19 Rent Related Concessions after June 30, 2021," which amended IFRS 16, leases.

New Quality Management Implementation Guides Now Available Guides Provide a Pathway to a Robust, Effective Quality Management System

NEW YORK - The International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) released two guides to help stakeholders implement its suite of quality management standards. The two-guide will help stakeholders understand the standards and properly implement the requirements in the manner intended:

First-time Implementation Guide for International Standard on Quality Management (ISQM) 1, Quality Management for Firms that Perform Audits or Reviews of Financial Statements, or Other Assurance or Related Services Engagements.

First-time Implementation Guide for ISQM 2, Engagement Quality Reviews.

The IAASB will also issue an implementation guide for International Standard on Auditing 220 (Revised), Quality Management for an Audit of Financial Statements, in Q3. The suite of quality management standards come into effect on December 15, 2022.

These publications do not amend or override the International Standards on Quality Management (ISQMs), the texts of which alone are authoritative. Reading the publications are not a substitute for reading the ISQMs.

The IAASB encourages all practitioners to plan early for appropriate implementation, given the potential impact of the changes to firms' systems of quality management.
