Training Courses of November 2020

AMMAN - The International Arab Society of Certified Accountants (IASCA) held a digital training course titled "Internal Auditing and Introduction to Corporate Governance" through Microsoft Teams App.

The training course aimed at introducing the participants to the essence and targets of revision and auditing, the internal control systems and their functions, the internal auditing standards, and the procedures of the process of revision and auditing. Moreover, the training course aimed at enabling the participants of conducting audit engagements, with high efficiency, for all the main functions of the organization.

At the end of the training course, all participants received certificates of attendance and ensured that the course matched their practical needs and requirements.

Moreover, IASCA held a digital training course titled "Fundamentals of Finance and Accounting for Non-Financial Managers" through Microsoft Teams App.

The training course aimed at introducing the participants to the concept of financial performance, the fundamentals of financial accounting, the basic financial statements and financial reports, and the International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS), in addition to enabling the participants of using the financial analysis to read and interpret the basic financial statements.

At the end of the training course, all participants received certificates of attendance and ensured that the course matched their practical needs and requirements.

Additionally, IASCA held a digital training course titled “IFRS 9 (financial instruments)” through Microsoft Teams App.

The training course aimed at introducing the requirements of IFRS 9, financial instruments, that supersedes IAS 39, as well as providing an in depth analysis of IFRS 9, financial instruments, through providing several examples and illustrative graphs to explain the business model and test the properties of cash flows in terms of classification of financial assets, amortization cost, measurement of fair value of financial assets and liabilities, and derecognition of financial assets.

At the end of the training course, all participants received certificates of attendance and ensured that the course matched their practical needs and requirements.

Moreover, the training course introduced the requirements of the initial recognition of financial instruments along with the classification, measurement, and subsequent measurement of such instruments on the date of financial statements. The course addressed the recognition of gains and losses arising from the evaluation of financial assets and the required disclosures. A comparison between the requirements of the new standard and the requirements of IAS 39 was also conducted.

At the end of the training course all participants received certificates of attendance and ensured that the course matched their practical needs and requirements.

Furthermore, IASCA digitally held a training course titled “Risk Based Internal Auditing” through Microsoft Teams App.

The training course aimed at enhancing the practical competence of the participants by developing standards and guidelines to enable them of understanding the systems of accounting and controls, and how the risks of audit engagements are managed. Participants were also introduced to the concept of risk based auditing, the recent methods of risk assessment, the concept of risk management, the real role of internal auditing in risk management, the concept of self-assessment of controls and how to apply such assessment. Participants were also trained to build an internal audit plan according to the risk approach, from the practical perspective, and to plan and implement an audit engagement according to the risk approach.

At the end of the training course, all participants received certificates of attendance and ensured that the course matched their practical needs and requirements.

Speech: Trustee Chair's Keynote to UNCTAD on Sustainability Reporting

Where: UNCTAD virtual

LONDON - Chair of the IFRS Foundation Trustees Erkki Liikanen delivered the keynote speech at the UNCTAD Intergovernmental Working Group of Experts on International Standards of Accounting and Reporting, introducing the Trustees' Consultation Paper on Sustainability Reporting.

Sustainability and climate change are global challenges, and there is now growing focus on how companies perform and report on these matters. So sustainability reporting is continuing to increase in importance for various stakeholders.

Notwithstanding differences in scope and motivation, most stakeholders share a common message: there is an urgent need to improve the consistency and comparability in sustainability reporting.

Comparable and consistent standards would allow businesses to build public trust through greater transparency of their sustainability initiatives, which will be helpful to investors and an even broader audience.

Large institutional investors demand better disclosure of climate risks and sustainability indicators. These investors use sustainability reporting to inform their decisions and want comparable and verifiable information. Investors are, together with companies, the driving force behind the increasing number of calls for clear, consistent and comparable sustainability information.

Increasing numbers of companies are committed to developing their sustainability reporting. Such commitment is driven by regulation, consumer behavior, investor demand and the recognition of the impact that managing sustainability risks can have on long-term value creation. Many consider the current practice of sustainability disclosure is inefficient due to a lack of commonly accepted standards and the inability to compare the reported information. Companies also lack clarity about how they should report on the impact of climate-change and the transition to a green economy.

As important drivers of their financial stability work, central banks are increasingly focused on climate-related risks and sustainability more broadly. Prudential regulators are starting to incorporate climate analyses into stress tests, and regulatory stress testing of banks and insurers increasingly includes estimates of climate-change impacts.

Regulators' involvement in sustainability reporting is influenced by their governments' public policy positions. Consequently, regulators' views of sustainability reporting are more prominent in some regions, such as Europe or China, where securities and banking regulators are key leaders of policy initiatives. However, the International Organization of Security Commissions (IOSCO) is also currently considering how its members could be involved in sustainability reporting.

In response to public policy initiatives to tackle climate change, companies will need to adapt their business models to become compatible with net zero carbon-emission targets that major jurisdictions have set in line with financial markets that are evolving to a net-zero world. Policy makers also expect that, in their reporting, companies may have to consider global public policy initiatives relating to climate change.

Auditing firms and other service providers develop and assess reporting frameworks. Auditing firms could play a major role in providing assurance if sustainability reporting were to be standardized and the information provided.

Many important sustainability reporting initiatives already exist, including those at a regional level. When the challenges are global, the most optimal would be global solutions working in harmony with regional initiatives.

There is an increasing number of calls for standardization and comparability of reporting on these matters. Some have argued that the IFRS Foundation should play a role in this area. One reason is that IFRS Standards, developed by the Foundation's standard-setting body, the International Accounting Standards Board, are required for use in more than 140 countries.

At the IFRS Foundation, the Trustees review the strategy every five years. We are preparing for such a review now. It is an opportunity and a duty for us to consider key strategic issues in this context.

We have decided to look at sustainability as a separate topic. And that is why we have prepared a Consultation Paper, which was published at the end of September and is open for comment until the end of the year.

The first question is: is there demand for sustainability standards at a global level?

If replies lead to a positive consensus, another question follows: should the IFRS Foundation play a role in this area? Our Consultation Paper sets out possible ways forward, if the IFRS Foundation is asked to play a role.

One option is to establish a new, separate sustainability standards board. This board would sit alongside the International Accounting Standards Board within the IFRS Foundation. This approach has merit for both boards, given the increasing impact of sustainability and climate-related matters in companies' financial statements. Many jurisdictions are beginning to require that companies provide climate-related disclosures in addition to the disclosures required by IFRS Standards.

But for this option to be successful, several conditions should be met.

Support is needed from public authorities, global regulators and other market stakeholders. A new board should work with regional authorities to achieve global consistency and reduce complexity in reporting. One important pre-condition is an appropriate level of resources, including separate funding and appropriate technical expertise. You also need an adequate governance structure.

The process could build gradually, starting with a focus on climate-related reporting standards. Naturally, the work would take into consideration existing developments and various initiatives in the field. The big five ESG international standard-setters in this area respond positively to the publication of our document and commit to working jointly with us to deliver the optimum solution.

I still want to reiterate: this is a demand-driven process. If demand exists, then we will look to examine how to move forward. If you have views on this topic, whatever they are, please let us know. If there is no demand, then there is nothing more for us to do. It's down to you.

IPSASB Issues Exposure Draft to Clarify Guidance on Borrowing Costs Stakeholder comments on Exposure Draft 74 sought by March 1, 2021

NEW YORK - The International Public Sector Accounting Standards Board (IPSASB) has released for comment Exposure Draft (ED) 74, IPSAS 5, Borrowing Costs – Non-Authoritative Guidance. The ED proposes the addition of non-authoritative guidance to IPSAS 5.

The proposed non-authoritative guidance would add implementation guidance and illustrative examples to IPSAS 5. The new material proposed in ED 74 would clarify how the existing principles for when borrowing costs can be capitalized should be applied in various regularly encountered public sector contexts. No amendments are proposed to the authoritative material in IPSAS 5.

“We undertook this project to address the practical challenges constituents identified in determining which borrowing costs can be capitalized and when,” said IPSASB Chair Ian Carruthers. “This is an important step in enhancing comparability between those public sector entities that capitalize borrowing costs.”

How to Comment

To access the Exposure Draft and its summary At-a-Glance document, or to submit a comment, visit the IPSASB website, www.ipsasb.org. Comments on the Consultation Paper are requested by March 1, 2021.

The IPSASB encourages IFAC members, associates, and regional accountancy organizations to promote the availability of this Consultation Paper to their members and employees.
